Tickers A: HSNAX C: HSNCX F: HSNFX I: HSNIX R3: HSNRX R4: HSNSX R5: HSNTX R6: HSNVX Y: HSNYX

What Happened?

- Mixed economic data left market participants grappling with the expected timing and magnitude of Fed rate cuts
- US Treasury yields finished little changed on the month, and spreads continued to compress across most fixed-income sectors
- Most major central banks held rates steady while laying the groundwork for policy easing later in the year

Performance Highlights

Contributors

- Exposure to high-yield bonds benefited performance. Quality composition remains strong relative to history, and we expect better opportunities to increase exposure at wider spreads.
- Allocations to emerging markets—both corporates and sovereigns—aided results. We limit emerging-market (EM) exposure to high-conviction turnaround stories.
- Positioning within non-agency RMBS helped returns. We continue to favor seasoned RMBS, which embed substantial home price appreciation and can withstand price declines in our view.

Detractors

- None of the sector exposures detracted from performance during the month, though returns for EM local debt were flat

Current Insight and Positioning From Wellington Management

- Economic data releases increase our confidence that a soft-landing scenario could unfold for the US economy. We're positioned with a close to neutral risk posture.
- We continue to be excited about today's historically high yields and believe there will be upside potential from taking advantage of credit market dislocations as they arise
- We're still finding plenty of opportunities to add value through credit sector rotation, for example in structured finance, European financials, and EM corporates. We also maintain sizable allocations to cash and developed-market government bonds with high liquidity.
- We expect pressure on spreads if heightened market volatility and the rising-rate environment persist

Important Risks: Investing involves risk, including the possible loss of principal. Security prices fluctuate in value depending on general market and economic conditions and the prospects of individual companies. The Fund may allocate a portion of its assets to specialist portfolio managers, which may not work as intended. • Fixed income security risks include credit, liquidity, call, duration, event and interest-rate risk. As interest rates rise, bond prices generally fall. • Investments in high-yield ("junk") bonds involve greater risk of price volatility, illiquidity, and default than higher-rated debt securities. • Foreign investments, including foreign government debt, may be more volatile and less liquid than U.S. investments and are subject to the risk of currency fluctuations and adverse political, economic and regulatory developments. These risks may be greater, and include additional risks, for investments in emerging markets. • Derivatives are generally more volatile and sensitive to changes in market or economic conditions than other securities; their risks include currency, leverage, liquidity, index, pricing, regulatory and counterparty risk. • The risks associated with mortgage-related and asset-backed securities as well as collateralized loan obligations (CLOs) include credit, interest-rate, prepayment, liquidity, default and extension risk. • The purchase of securities in the To-Be-Announced (TBA) market can result in higher portfolio turnover and related expenses as well as price and counterparty risk. • Restricted securities may be more difficult to sell and price than other securities. • Loans can be difficult to value and less liquid than other types of debt instruments; they are also subject to nonpayment, collateral, bankruptcy, default, extension, prepayment and insolvency risks. • Obligations of U.S. Government agencies are supported by varying degrees of credit but are generally not backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. • The Fund may have high portfolio turnover, which could increase its transaction costs and an investor's tax liability.
